Ten Bank Street is a natural clay-colored, 15-story office building located in Westchester's White Plains financial district. The building is at the corner of Bank Street and Martine Avenue, just one block from entrances to Metro North commuter trains. A polished metal, fan-like sculpture stands in the front plaza. Parking is available in the building's own underground garage with entrances from Martine Avenue in front and from behind the building off Bank Street. Announce you are an R.Bird visitor and you will be welcome for 2-hour visitor parking. Outdoor public parking is also available on the opposite side of Bank Street.

From New York City by train.

35 minutes

From Grand Central Terminal take any northbound Metro North Harlem Line train that includes a stop at White Plains. Best travel is by express trains where White Plains is the first stop. If you miss the express, local trains can take you as long as 60 minutes. Exit the train at White Plains station. Walk east one block from the station and then south one or two blocks.

If you are travelling by train and have other business in the area that would make it convenient to rent a car outside of New York City, there is a Hertz rental office conveniently located at the North White Plains train station - the next stop after White Plains.
